

the possibility to undertake. With whom would you share your intention to do the first step?

Conclusion

8. To attempt to do something new is a risk. You never know what the result will be. However, if you want to be absolutely sure for the results, there is only one way: to do nothing. Of course, no one can fail in a bid, but the failure may prove invaluable experience. Mistakes and failures provide exceptional learning experiences, as well as able to provide opportunities for learning, to stimulate creativity, to assist in personal and spiritual growth and to help us also to understand that in addition to our strengths we have our limitations.
